

Environmental Education and Biodiversity

The Field Studies Council is an environmental education charity committed to helping people, discover, explore, understand and be inspired by the natural world. Its network of centres provides day and residential courses for all ages from young children to retired adults from schools and communities throughout the UK. It also reaches many others through its publications and community-based programmes. www.field-studies-council.org

The learning locations in London, including Bushy Park currently provide day courses and short visits to study biodiversity; it is also possible to have an outreach visit from an experienced teaching officer in order to conduct OPAL biodiversity surveys. www.opalexplornature.org/surveys

For more information about courses, prices and booking, please visit www.field-studies-council.org/london or email enquiries.ldn@field-studies-council.org

